Union Home Minister said that today the foundation stones for 10 new projects of the Delhi Police have been laid, and the first phase of the Safe City Project, built at a cost of about ₹857 crore, has also been inaugurated. Under this, the modern Integrated Command, Control, Communication and Computer Centre (C4I) has been dedicated to the people of Delhi. He further said that under the first phase of the program to connect Delhi with 10,000 cameras, 2,100 cameras have already gone live, and the work of integrating more than 15,000 existing cameras with the system has been completed. Shri Amit Shah said that over the past 11 years, under the leadership of Prime Minister Shri Narendra Modi, the country has achieved several significant milestones. He stated that whenever justice is discussed in the country, the three new Nyaya Sanhita will certainly be mentioned. He said that the laws enacted by the British 150 years ago have now been repealed and a justice-centric legal system has been established. The Home Minister added that within the next two years, after the full implementation of these laws, any FIR filed anywhere in the country will receive a final decision up to the Supreme Court within three years.

Union Home Minister said that in the new Nyaya Sanhita, a separate chapter has been added for crimes against children and women, and e-FIR and Zero FIR have been given legal backing. Under ICJS (Integrated Criminal Justice System), the police, judiciary, forensic science, prosecution, and prisons have been integrated, and their services have been made online. He said that for the first time, community service has been legally introduced as a form of punishment for minor offenses.
